

Stories

'You're Leading Me On!' Women Reveal Innocent Behaviors That Men Misinterpret

Share

Report Ad

Best Of

People Share The Most Over The Top Selfish Act They've Witnessed.

Stories

Grateful People Share The Most Incredible Act Of Generosity Someone Has Ever Done For Them.

Positivity

10.20.2017 | Veracia Ankras

POSITIVITY DID YOU KNOW?

Women's bodies are usually objectified and with that we are completely disregarded as autonomous beings. So we are always doing something that is 'asking for it' even if we aren't aware of what they are doing - or if we are actually doing nothing at all.

The following Ask Redditors share behaviors that warrant men to think they are leading them on and their experiences to go with it.

If you are interested in more stories? Find the original thread at the end of the article.

vd

Report Ad

1. Being Friends

During my pre-pubescent years, I had a lot of male and female friends and I found it easy to talk to both genders because I treated both the same way-as if they were full people deserving of my interest and attention during a conversation.

During the teenage years I realized that more and more of my male friends started dropping off because they assumed that my friendship meant that I was really in love with them. In early adulthood I became apprehensive to even start friendships with men and as a mid-20s adult I am apprehensive to even hold deep conversations with men lest they expect something in return.

Sure, I'll do small talk and am friendly but I won't ever let you know me or try to get to know you unless I know for SURE that you're not one of those guys who thinks that women are incapable of holding an engaged conversation unless they crave the penis.

focker_number4

Report Ad

2. Doing Nothing At All

Being young.

Turning fifty was the best idea I've ever had.

Top

Most Shared

LGBTQ

People Were Mad At Campbell's Soup Because Of Their Gay Friendly Ad And This Campbell's Fan Had The Best Response Ever

06.22.2017 | By Sara P.

Love = love <3

145 Comments

Positivity, Stories

Teachers Share The Funniest Things They've Pretended To Get Mad At Students For.

09.21.2017 | By Rhea Braganza

He proclaimed himself as the "Pop Tart King."

0 Comments

Trending

Should Outed Racists Lose Their Jobs? The Internet Responds.

08.21.2017 | By Robbie Woods

This is what happens when you get yourself on CNN.

18 Comments

Did You Know?

Do Elephants Really Remember Everything?

09.01.2017 | By Robbie Woods

The elephant brain is a lot like ours. And that's not all...

4 Comments

CONTACT US PRIVACY POLICY TERMS OF USE

gateway  blend +  KNOWABLE